Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.1.1) [Mac/Win]

NEW DELHI: The government has asked the Railways to work out modalities to make railway staff buy the new uniforms and cap badges that will be introduced in coming months. The move will be undertaken in the backdrop of the railways being the only sector in the country where the majority of workers do not change their apparel after induction. This will mean changing the job attire as per the new norms announced by the ministry of railways last month. Moreover, the move will not only reduce dreary, if not stained formal wear of up to 10 lakh railway staffers, but will also ensure that the change does not come at the expense of their comfort. Officers deputed on different depots of the Railways' headquarters told TOI that they were told that the ministry had sent a note to the railways asking the latter to work out modalities of the uniform and cap badge for different categories of railway workers such as ticket checkers, assistant traffic managers, section managers, guards, drivers, customer service inspectors and divisional railway managers for implementation. "It was also specifically asked to do it in consultation with the Indian Railways Staff Association, which has been asked to get in touch with its members and get inputs from them on the proposed changes," a senior officer said. The Indian Railways Staff Association has been monitoring the formulation of the new rules in detail and made its inputs on the modalities of the proposed uniform last month. This means that the changes are likely to be implemented within the next few months. "In due course, we have a plan to coordinate with the Indian Railways Staff Association to introduce the new norms with the earliest effect," a second officer said. Currently, different categories of railway employees such as ticket checkers, assistant traffic managers, section managers, guards, drivers, customer service inspectors and divisional railway managers have got a majority of their uniforms from the same "stock", that too of new materials. The ministry has asked the railways to look at increasing the number of wearables such as badges and caps to a minimum of five out of which one should be non-conformity. "The railways are in the process of issuing the revised guidelines to all categories of railway staff that will cover details, including a cap badge in different colours for each category of railway staff," a third officer said. The zonal railways have been given the responsibility of the implementation. "Once a zonal railway implements the guidelines, other railway circles will be asked to implement them. ♦
